About Justine South AfricaIt all started in 1973, when Justine introduced their iconic and now famous Tissue Oil. The company was founded by Veronica Devine and Paul Symes, who had the vision to deliver skin care products specifically designed for the harsh South African climate. Determined to make their vision a reality, Devine eventually received a loan from R10 000 (after being rejected nearly a dozen times!) and launched Justine Cosmetics in May 1973. Justine products are sold through direct sales, where customers order directly from the Justine brochure. By the mid-90s, Justine Cosmetics had already had more than 20 000 consultants selling their products, making them the most successful direct selling skin care brand in Zuid-Africa. In 1995, they merged with the international company, Avon (founded in 1886) to become Avon Justine.
